We can take the three equations which express the orthogonal property as the primary set and associate the other two with them; the integration of the equations proves to be possible. Or we can take the equations which express the equality of curvatures as the primary set; they are integrable, and their integrals are then subjected to the three simultaneous equations of the first order taken as a subsidiary set. The first of these processes is as follows: f it leads to the complete result. The second of them will be indicated later, and the result already obtained will be used in illustration of the theory of partial differential equations. 12. From the equations satisfied by, ij, we have Full references will be found in Darboux s Theorie generate des Surfaces; and Cayley s memoir On Curvature and Orthogonal Surfaces, Coll. Math. Papers, Vol. 7m., pp. 292-315, may be consulted with advantage. To these must beadded Darboux s Lecons sur les Systimes orthogonaux, the first volume of which has appeared since this paper was written. t The initial part, 12, is a modification of Lame s analysis, applied to triply orthogonal systems not limited by the property of having equal curvatures; see his Lecons sur les Coordonnees curvilignes, in particular, Lessons v. and vi. Similarly for the others; so that, if a, /J, y denote, Ij, in any order, and if u denote any one of the...
